

Although, to all appearances, these five were all of them dangerous miscreants, the workingmen brought at once a petition to the Perfect for their immediate release.

Rejected Petition.

The Perfect referred the petitioners to the Interior, who is also Minister of Justice. The Minister lost no time in turning the petition down—in which, I may state in passing, he did perfectly right. Well, when this plan had failed, the strikers formed a procession and set out to take the prison by storm. By means of a heavy beam transformed into a battering ram, the strikers succeeded, amid great excitement, in knocking down the principal door. But they were hardly prepared for what they saw when the door at last flew open.

On the other, drawn up in fighting formation and ready to fire was a company of artillery. The crowd fell back and scattered through the city. Most of the strikers assembled shortly afterward in the principal square of the city, a place called the "Champ de Mars," and it was here that they were charged by the cavalry, not once but a half a dozen times.

Barriades were thrown up, as you know, and by and by the infantry came to help the cavalry and to level these fortifications. But as the infantry approached the first line of these crude defenses they were met with a shower of bullets and stones and a chair or two. Then amid the general hubbub a dozen or so officers were struck and twice as many soldiers. It was then that the soldiers, without awaiting the order of their officers, pulled up their pieces and let fly at the crowd in front of them. Many a man dropped dead in his tracks and many fell wounded as they sought to flee.

Not only Limoges was stirred by these tragic events, but Paris as well. It was on the very day following—that is, Tuesday—that the Cabinet was called to task in the Chamber of Deputies. And amid the splendid speech made by the Minister of the Interior that the Chamber declared that the government was in the right. It did this with an ample majority and by a vote expressing sympathy with all the victims concerned, both military and civilian.

On the following day the still inspired Paris Municipal Council felt called upon to mix in and passed a vote similar to that passed by the Chamber, though what business it was of the Council's no one seems to know. And gradually Limoges has calmed down. There was trouble also at Nantes, where the dockers were again on strike, but this was smoothed over by the ready concession made by the employers, raising wages and assuring a day of rest.

Trouble for Delcasse.

After devoting a part of its time to these questions of internal warfare and municipal matters, the Chamber has turned its attention to the relations of France with the rest of the Powers, and M. Delcasse not only had to respond to critics of his Moroccan policy, but, in a more general way, had to explain the present status of our relations with Germany. M. Delcasse, in fact, was charged with being responsible, through his exaggerated coldness toward and loquaciousness from Germany, with that grandstand play of Emperor William at Tangier. This was called a check for our diplomacy, as, after a fashion, we were forced to take notice of the imperial utterance and furnish something of an explanation, if not an actual excuse, for our delay in notifying Germany of our arrangement in the matter with England.

M. Delcasse was obviously at fault. The best that he could do in face of his critics, was to enumerate his various services to the country, which are, as a matter of fact, fully recognized.

M. Rouvier intervened on behalf of his colleague and no vote was taken, but the debate was fatal to the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

In the meantime, the debate on the separation of Church and State continues. The commission of the Chamber has made a concession or two. It now admits that the law associations which are to take over church property, should be in accord with the various bishops.

And they have at last wound up the business of the budget, both Chamber and Senate yielding each a little to the other. The French legislators are going to be able to pass their Easter holidays in peace.

THE SUPREME COURT BACKS UP THE PINKERTONS
Injunction Granted Against Hagens & Travers, Large Wholesale Liquor Dealers in Buffalo, Made Permanent.

Wholesalers and Retailers in All Parts of the Country Who Are Attempting to Imitate this Renowned Medicinal Brand, are Warned to Desist, or Beware of the Consequences.

Wholesale druggists and liquor dealers throughout the country have been very much stirred up over the recent exposure of the methods of Hagens & Travers, large wholesale liquor dealers in Buffalo, N. Y.

This firm, which occupies a prominent position in the trade, was caught by the Pinkerton people in the most flagrant violation of the law, being engaged in the manufacture and sale of Duff's Pure Malt Whiskey, which, as every one knows, is made only by the Duff's Pure Malt Whiskey Company, of Rochester, N. Y.

The Duff's people have been aware for some time past that in various parts of the country spurious Duff's Pure Malt Whiskey was being made and sold to the trade in defiance of the law and to the injury of their business.

The first successful effort to stop this practice was made when the concern employed the services of the Pinkerton Detective Agency. A crew of detectives were put to work in every city in the Union under the skillful direction of a superintendent. It was said on the authority of an officer of the company that the investigation of a most startling nature, and it was discovered that some of the very largest houses in the country were engaged in the practice of manufacturing spurious goods, and selling them as Duff's Pure Malt Whiskey. It did not take the Pinkerton men long to narrow down investigations and secure evidence to convict the guilty parties.

The Duff's Company, upon the advice of learned counsel, has begun a series of prosecutions starting with the Buffalo case mentioned above, and Judge Nash of the Supreme Court, who granted the temporary injunction against Hagens & Travers some weeks ago, has just made that injunction permanent upon the admission by the plaintiffs of their guilt.

The Duff's Company is now in a position to recover large damages from Hagens & Travers, and other prosecutions will follow rapidly, one upon the other.

The actions are to be brought in the United States Supreme Court, and, inasmuch as the law is very strict on the matter, and the evidence so very convincing, the Duff's people will probably clear the country of spurious goods for a long time to come.

Robinson, of the American Members Committee, for the international yacht race from Sandy Hook to the Lizard for the Gannet, Empress trophy, has arrived with his family at the Hyde Park Hotel, where he has taken apartments for a term extending till the end of the yachting season. Mr. Robinson went to Paris yesterday to purchase an automobile, which he will use for his journeys to the Lizard and other points along the coast. I am told he intends chartering a sloop over here and will probably enter her in some of the season's races.

Mr. H. P. Whitaker, proprietor of the Hotel Netherlands, New York, and Mrs. Whitaker, who have been in Paris for some time, have arrived at the Carlton on their way home. Mr. and Mrs. James McDonald, who returned recently to their house in Cadogan Square from the south of France, are passing the Easter holidays at Brighton.

NEED FOR LAWS SURE AND LESS EXPENSIVE

Cost of Extradition of Prisoners Illustrated by Cases in England.

(Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch and New York Herald.)
(Copyright, by the New York Herald Co.)
LONDON, April 22.—The cost of extradition of prisoners, which is so fully shown by the Gannet and Green case, where the alleged embezzlement was enormous, is illustrated in two American cases which came up at Bow Street this week, where the sums involved were small.

One of these, I am told, is the first of the kind to come up here where the prisoner was wanted by an American "colony."

The prisoner, whose name is Kapea, embezzled $500 from a Honolulu bank. The detective who came for him will have traveled about twenty thousand miles at a cost which, with the carrying of the prisoner's expenses in transit and during the twenty-one days' delay which the law gives to the accused after the arrival of the detective here, will be several times the sum stolen.

The other case is that of John Conroy, sixty-one, a veteran of the Civil War, who was made executor without bond by a dying comrade who lived at the Soldiers' Home, Washington, and is charged with having appropriated the $1,600 comprising the estate. Two detectives arrived here two weeks ago from Washington after Conroy. When the case came up at Bow Street, he was held for further evidence. I have heard both Englishmen and Americans discuss the need of extradition laws which will be surer, swifter and less expensive.

Week in London.

(Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch and New York Herald.)
(Copyright, by the New York Herald Co.)
LONDON, April 22.—A more distant week than this Holy Week, both socially and as regards the weather could hardly have been experienced in London.

Beginning with a short, but sharp, shower on Sunday, the weather has been very boisterous and cold up till now. On two days there have been sharp blasts of sleet, while at night it has been so frosty that the blossoms on the fruit trees in more exposed quarters have all disappeared.

A good many of the nobility, however, have elected to make up parties at their country houses instead of crossing to the continent for the holidays.

The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, for instance, have gone to Blenheim; Lord and Lady Zetland are up in Yorkshire at Aske, but they intend going shortly for a cruise in the yacht before settling in Arlington Street for the season.

The Duke and Duchess of Buccleugh will only stop a short time in Scotland, as they are returning to London for the wedding of their son, Lord Herbert Scott, next Wednesday.

The Duke and Duchess of Newcastle have gone to Clumber, where the church services are very elaborate at Easter.

The Duke and Duchess of Westminster are in France, but they are returning very shortly as they are having a big party for the Duke's birthday, beginning May 6th.

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, who are still at Ploers Castle, returned to London soon to take up their residence in Lord Dudley's house in Carlton Gardens until the end of July.

Lord and Lady Bathurst are in retirement at Lincolns, but the latter is in deepest mourning for her much lamented brother, Mr. Oliver Northwick.

SEYMOUR ACQUITTED BY COURT MARTIAL
(By Associated Press.)
MANILA, April 22.—After a trial before naval court martial, Lieutenant Commander Isaac Knight Seymour has been acquitted.

Lieutenant Commander Seymour was the navigating officer of the U. S. S. Albatross when that vessel grounded in the Straits of Malacca, about six months ago, and it is presumed that his trial was in connection with that affair.

Commander J. B. Briggs, who was in command of the Albatross, was also tried by court martial and acquitted.

PARIS, April 22.—This city is not behind New York in protesting against the telephone company. The annual general meeting of the Association des Abonnés au Téléphone has just been held under the presidency of the Marquis de Montebello, founder and president of the Association. It was announced at the meeting that the number of members had increased during the year from 1,500 to 6,500, out of a total of 40,000 telephone subscribers. The Marquis de Montebello urged that the administration must be forced to adopt the systems and regulations which have worked well in other countries.

MEXICO, April 22.—The bull fight held here Sunday in an improvised arena in the Plaza Cap Martin attracted more than a thousand spectators, who witnessed the greatest excitement. At least one-third of the spectators were women, but I noticed no American or English women present.

Six bulls were used, but no horses. Six agile toreros, wearing the bull's, some excitement being caused by one getting knocked down. He was rescued by his colleagues, who rushed in just in time.

The performance is to be repeated Easter Sunday.

PARIS, April 22.—The coat of arms of the French Republic has been left to the hands of the Ambassadors and Ministers abroad, resulting in a sad lack of uniformity. M. Delcasse has just selected an official design, which will be communicated to all the representatives of France abroad.

The chief feature of the design are the lictors and fasces, framed between oak and olive boughs, with a cross of the Legion of Honor pendant therefrom. The inscription is "Liberte, Egalite, Fraternite." The monogram "J. P." is not recognized as official.

After explaining that changed in the earth from the nebular period to the development of the atmosphere and the formation of the earth's crust by gradual cooling, he shows how the reduction of
